New technology hits Utah

The Utah Assistive Technology Program announces the UATP Classifieds: our newest comprehensive means of helping Utahns access the equipment they need, regardless of where they live in the state.

The new online service connects device sellers and donors directly to people who need technology to be more independent.

Examples of equipment that can be advertised include mobility equipment, adapted vans, environmental adaptations, technology to aid with communication or learning, daily living, adapted computer technology and much more.

Sellers and donors can use the service to ensure their equipment can help someone else, once it is no longer needed. You can browse the items available without registering. To use the service, register online for UATP Classifieds. Devices are searchable by device type (mobility or daily living, for example) and by list type (free, priced, priced or best offer).

Items posted will be subject to review before they can be viewed publicly. UATP provides a place for buyers, sellers, donors and recipients to meet, but UATP is a third party that is not involved in the exchange, liability or monetary transaction of devices on the site.

To find out more and access the system, visit our website:http://www.uatpat.org/classifieds/

If you have additional questions, contact Alma Burgess at alma.burgess@usu.edu.

MEDICAL TRANSPORTATION INFO AVAILABLE
Once again Active Re-Entry would like to extend a big thank you to Newfield Oil and Gas Exploration Foundation - not just for their $20,000 donation to assist with Assistive Technology and such projects for individuals living in the Uintah Basin, but also for their extraordinary employees - lead by Cheyenne Bateman. Here are some of the projects the employees took on this November.

An autistic young man’s basketball stand fell over. The Newfield employees designed and built the pole and backboard, installed the hoop, and dug the hole and filled it with enough cement that it will not fall over again. He loves to play basketball everyday so the young man was ecstatic when it was finished.

Because the trex was slippery, they re-did the porch with cement and added side entrance and new handrails.

We would like say how much we greatly appreciate Justin Krieger’s and his crew for all of their work.
Fire Safety for Your Special Needs Child

While every family should have a home fire safety plan, it’s even more critical if you have a family member with cognitive or physical disabilities. These individuals are 2.5 to 6.5 times more likely to die in a house fire. However, there are a number of safety precautions you can take to reduce the risk of injury for your loved ones.

Identify exits

Assess each room in your home and identify at least two exits, particularly in your child’s bedroom. Make sure the windows and doors open easily. You may also wish to obtain child-finder fire rescue decals to place on your child’s windows. This may save precious time as it helps emergency responders locate the most likely whereabouts of your child.

Smoke alarms

Make sure your house has smoke alarms on every level and in every sleeping room. Smoke alarms can be interconnected, so that if one sounds, all will sound simultaneously. This may provide extra time to escape if the fire starts in a more distant part of the house.

Test your smoke alarms every month and replace batteries often. Some devices have non-replaceable batteries that will last 10 years and may be easier to maintain.

If your child will not respond well to loud noises, consider a smoke alarm that uses a recorded message of your voice, saying something like, “leave the house now.” If your child has a hearing impairment, install a smoke alarm with high intensity strobe lights, as well as vibrating bed and pillow shakers that are activated by the smoke alarm.

Fire extinguishers and home fire sprinklers

Install home fire sprinklers and place fire extinguishers in high risk areas, such as the kitchen or a room with a fireplace. These items may help to keep fires small and allow more time for escape.

According to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), home fire sprinklers only cost $1.35 per square foot, may reduce homeowners’ insurance premiums, and reduce the risk of dying in a fire by about 80 percent.

Special equipment

Depending on your child’s needs, you may need special equipment to help safely and quickly evacuate your child in the case of a fire.

For example, if your child is non-ambulatory (or ambulates slowly) keep a plastic sled or blanket in an accessible location, particularly near the top of the stairs. It will be easier to drag your child to safety than to carry them, especially under conditions of heavy smoke.

If your child has difficulty with verbal communication, set up a signaling system — like a bell or whistle — so your child can call for help.

Evacuation plan

Map out and regularly practice an evacuation plan with your family; all family members should participate. Take photos of every room to create a visual step-by-step plan. Review and practice leaving valuable items behind, staying low, touching doors to check for heat, and “stop, drop, and roll.” Choose a meeting place in front of the house; make sure that everyone can identify the meeting place and knows they should stay at the meeting place.

To see these ideas in practice, watch this video from SafeKids Worldwide: Fire Safety for Families with Children with Cognitive Impairments. Or, use this interactive fire safety plan e-book from the NFPA. The NFPA also has a website with videos, games and activities designed for kids: sparky.org.

Ask a fire expert

Review your fire safety plan with a member of your local fire department. Bring your child with you to the fire station so they can see the fire trucks and learn not to fear the firefighters. Ask the firefighters if your community has a special needs disaster registry, so you can provide as much advance information as possible about your family and your special needs child.

Caution: Supplemental oxygen

If you have supplemental oxygen in your home, please remember that oxygen causes fire to burn hotter and faster — even if it’s not in use. Personal and household items can ignite at lower temperatures if they have previously been saturated with oxygen. Keep oxygen tanks at least 5 feet away from any heat source, open flame, or electrical device.

Absolutely DO NOT allow smoking in your home and consider posting NO SMOKING signs at the front door. Do not use open flames, including candles, matches, wood stoves, and sparking toys when supplemental oxygen is in use.
Short-Term Money Follows the Person Extension Signed Into Law

Last Friday H.R. 259, the Medicaid Extenders Act, was signed into law. The bill includes three months of funding for the Money Follows the Person (MFP) Program. As we know, three months is not enough to sustain the work of MFP, but it does provide a much needed extension while we continue our advocacy for a longer renewal. This is certainly something to be celebrated!

Thank you to all of you for your work to get this done.

Also included in the bill is an extension of the Home and Community Based Services (HCBS) Medicaid spousal impoverishment protections. Spousal impoverishment protections protect a portion of a married couple’s income and assets when one individual needs Medicaid long term services and supports. Historically, spousal impoverishment protections only applied if one spouse was institutionalized, but a provision of the Affordable Care Act changed that so they also apply to Medicaid HCBS. That provision expired, so this bill provides a needed short-term extension (through March 31, 2019) while advocacy for a long-term extension continues.

Thank you for all of your work to get this bill passed!
